GAME RULES

Gather 4–8 players.

Deal out white character cards to every player. Each character card represents a community organization or community member. Players should all receive the same number of cards. (The exact number depends on the size of the group. Just set aside any extras.)

Place the deck of icon cards face-down in the middle of the group. Each icon card represents one of the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).

Pick a judge for round one. The judge flips over the top icon card and reads it out loud.

All players, except the judge, choose one of their character cards that they think best could address the SDG. In turn, players put down their chosen character or organization and explain why they made that choice.

The judge then chooses which one they think fits best.

If the judge picks your card, you have won that round! Keep the SDG card to track how many rounds you win. You're the judge for the next round.

Each player (except the judge) will replenish their character cards. Repeat these steps to continue play. The game ends when you run out of icon or white cards.

DEBRIEF

Discuss as a group what strategies helped you win a round.

Were there things you could do to help or hurt your chances of having your card picked?

How did your own values or those of the other players factor into the game?

Discuss as a group how these cards relate to each other.

Was there anything surprising about the SDGs, or their connections to your life?

Was there anything interesting or inspiring?
